

Good News - February 2018

All of our clubs have had a great start for the Spring semester. We praise God for providing a few teachers in places that desperately needed them. We still have a few clubs that we would love to divide due to large numbers; so, we're trusting God to provide. The winter weather makes maintaining buses a bigger chore, but days off school provide extra time for that. Thanks for praying.

Cora has officially started student teaching in the Edmond, Oklahoma area. She is teaching in a second grade classroom during January and February. Seth has also begun his first assignment teaching high school math. They're also keeping busy with wedding plans and looking into future employment.

Caleb started his new semester online with The College At Southeastern Seminary. He is taking five courses: Hermeneutics, Survey of American Literature, Church History, OT Book Study - Psalms, and Theology 2. He's still studying from home this semester so he can still help with clubs and as needed around the house.

Jacob and Olivia both competed in the National History Day competition again this year. They had a choice of methods and decided to write papers this year. The theme was Conflict and Compromise. Olivia wrote about the compromise of 1790 involving the US Capitol location and state debt. Jacob wrote on the Toledo Compromise. They both did very well and enjoyed doing the research.

Olivia survived mid-terms and is happy to be in the second semester of her 10th grade year. She is playing in a winter volleyball league again this year. She practices on Friday evenings and has tournaments every few weeks on Saturdays. It's a great way for her to meet new people and practice her skills during the months when she has to be indoors.
