

Good News – June 2023

We really enjoyed going to the national conference. We were able to see many people we hadn't seen in years. We loved the fellowship and the setting in the beautiful mountains. Now that we are back, camp preparation has really gotten busy. There is a lot to do to prepare the property itself, the army of volunteers, and the programming details. We are so thankful for the volunteer groups that came on workdays. Much was accomplished.

The two teachers still have classes until June 9. Right now, they are doing a lot of testing. For Cora, this testing is crucial for deciding who will need her for remedial help next year. They have been enjoying record-breaking high temperatures after a long winter. They are also glad to have the return of daylight. Living so far north has definitely been an adventure.

Caleb

Caleb was informed by CEF of Maryland that there was little for him to do for them over the summer, so he is thrilled to have the opportunity to return to Waynesboro and work at Good News Camp all summer long. He will be such an asset as he is willing to help wherever he is needed and brings many years of experience to the job. It will be nice to have him at home for the summer as well.

Jacob still really loves his work and home in Towson. It will be an adjustment for him living alone again after having Caleb there for the last few months, but he enjoys the adventure. He still plays bass guitar at his church most Sundays, and he goes to the young adult fellowship each Friday night.

Olivia

Olivia is home for a short time before she begins her internship in South Dakota. She finished the school year well and even won an award for outstanding junior engineering student. She is happy to have some time to rest and relax before a busy summer. She will fly back to Texas on May 25 and then spend two days driving up to Rapid City. We are glad to have family she can stay with along the way.
